

The Divorce Process

Five Important Considerations

Spousal support will need to be determined. The amount depends upon many factors including the length of the marriage, earning capacity and respective financial ability and need.

The court is required to order child support payments in all cases where children are involved.

The primary focus on custody is to advocate for the best interest of the child or children.

You and your spouse will also need to have your debts divided.

The court will decide which assets will be allocated to each spouse. The process involves determining which assets are community as opposed to separate assets.
